"Exalted of Low Degree"
The Public Stupidity
Irish Mary Bowles
Pickpockets Lament

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

At the League of Nations conference George Harvey is to sit where Woodrow Wilson sat. "The whirligig of time brings in his revenges" with a vengeance.

"He hath put down the mighty from THEIR seats, and exalted them of low degree." Harvey was never of low degree, but it is appropriate just.

A member of the New York Legislature, who opposed an appropriation in honor of the six hundredth anniversary of Dante's death, thinking that Dante was a baseball player, takes his place naturally beside the alderman that wanted to buy only two grindstones, one male and one female, and "let nature take her course."

The Hon. Tom Watson, of Georgia, now of the Senate, a remarkable orator, said: "Whenever you make a speech, remember that it is impossible to exaggerate the stupidity of the public." Every once in a while somebody proves it.

Mary Bowles, of Belfast, fifteen years old, was caught "wearing armor and carrying a Lewis gun." This young woman will go to an English reformatory prison until she is almost seven years old. What is the difference between the vision of Mary Bowles and that of Joan of Arc, looking out over the fields at Domremy, six hundred years ago, and dreaming that she would drive the English out of her country. The difference is one of SUCCESS. The English got Mary Bowles more quickly than they got Joan of Arc, and they did not have to burn her.

In European cities, as you know, there have well organized fraternities of beggars, with their rules and regulations, also fraternities beneath the police level of various criminals.

At Genoa the police chief gets an indignant letter from "The Francesco Pedigrees Association" saying that genuine members of the begging profession object to the amount of money stolen from them by unskilled hand beggars during the progress of the conference, and demanding that it not be stolen any more. Evidently there will be nothing to regulate in that line in the United States, but it isn't so different on railroad gentlemen, protesting that the public's indignation for moment taken from it through excessive freight and passenger rates and incompetent management.

Business men want to know how INDIVIDUALLY, MORALLY AND ECONOMICALLY they can help millions of people what they have not and need.

Albert B. Carter, man and woman of the race of land speculators, agent, publicity, school publicity. The most remarkable "Help Wanted" ad ever printed.

"The American Weekly," published in spite of the heart disease of every business man in the United States, is the most remarkable publication in the world. And the most remarkable thing about it is that it costs ten thousand dollars a week, and sells for a cent a copy, more than three million copies every Sunday.

At this time, when business men need to make every dollar do all the work it can do, that is important information.

Those who complain of taxes in the United States should consider the "scheme" to restore the finances of Austria. The debt will be guaranteed by certain bonds secured by COMPULSORY MORTGAGES ON ALL PUBLIC AND PRIVATE REAL ESTATE. That's REAL taxation.

The bill shutting out immigration will soon become law, probably. That will shut off the United States from its greatest source of growth and increasing prosperity.

National wealth and at once prosperity have increased with the population.

We need a hundred million more human beings here, to use up what we produce.

Those who believe that immigration cuts down wages believe what is not so.

Thirty-three years ago the first electric street car was run. In those days wages on street cars ran from seventy-five cents to a dollar and a quarter a day. Many millions of immigrants have come in since then. Now an electric street car worker makes fifty cents an hour or more. However, this motion enjoys making experiments with itself, and will survive one more, probably.

The great meat packers of the United States announce that sales to Europe last year dropped $156,000,000. You know what that means to the farmers of the United States. It is almost impossible for them to sell their live stock. They will become discouraged, cut down production, then suddenly will come a terrific increase in the price of living, due to scarcity of supplies.

While the exportation of farm products is cut down one single line more than half a thousand million this country receives from Europe, quarter of a thousand million in gold, in the first four months of this year.

Real prosperity has little to do with the amount of gold coin piled up in the government vaults.

STILLMAN CHALLENGED TO DUEL

BODYGUARD PROTECTS BANKER

Stillman Dared to Fight and Life Is Threatened by Writers of Letters

By International News Service.

New York, May 10.—One of a host of sympathizers who have come to the defense of Mrs. James A. Stillman since she was made defendant in the season's most sensational divorce suit has carried his enthusiasm to the length of formally challenging her wealthy banker husband to fight a duel, it became known today.

The challenge was communicated in person, it is said, and was not accepted. Mr. Stillman, in fact, was inclined to ignore it. His attorneys, however, were more seriously impressed. In fact, it is learned that a bodyguard has been employed for the banker as a result of what is interpreted at the time upon describing as a mere "incident."

The guard is said to be of athletic build and considered able to cope with any emergency that might arise as a result of the "incident."

Whether Mr. Stillman assented to the employment of the bodyguard could not be learned. Indeed, the information was held out that the precautionary step might have been taken by his advisers without his knowledge or consent.

The banker was a pitcher for two years on the Harvard Baseball Club and was a runner of note during his

BANKERS ATTACKED BY ADLOW

"Have Made Monkey of Bank Commissioner and Joke of General Public," He Says

In a scathing indictment of Boston banking methods, Representative Elijah Adlow of Boston, speaking in the House today, declared officials of the closed trust companies had violated the law with impunity.

He said that because of the weak spots in the law, these men "have made a monkey out of the bank commissioner and a joke of the general public."

Representative Adlow appeared before the House Committee on Rules in support of an order, filed by him calling for a sweeping investigation of the banking situation, laws and the personnel of the banks. This investigation would be made by a special committee, which, it is proposed, would recommend such changes in the laws as would protect the public.

FRIENDS OF CHINA TO OPPOSE SCHURMAN

New York, May 10.—A bitter fight is to be made by American friends of China to prevent, if possible, the confirmation of President Harding's nomination of Jacob Gould Schurman, former president of Cornell University, as minister to China. The nomination of Schurman, because of his pro-Japanese speeches, aired the stand came as a bombshell. In all true friends of China today, said Dr. M. Walker, founder and authority on Chinese and eastern questions.

BEACON MAY ABSORB EQUITABLE TRUST

Negotiations for the taking over of the Equitable Trust Company by the Beacon Trust Company are under way, it was learned today. One of the reasons for this action was said to be the ill-health of Charles B. Strecker, president and one of the largest stockholders of the Equitable Trust Co., who is going to retire from the banking business.

Chicago Divorcee Watches Sweetheart's End and Then Turns on Gas

By International News Service.

Chicago, May 10.—Middle-aged romance ended in tragedy here when the bodies of Mrs. Mabel Thomas, a divorcee, and Nicholas Miller, wealthy furniture dealer, were found side by side in a room in Miller's apartment.

Miller had been shot to death by Mrs. Thomas, who ended her life by inhaling gas.

Miller was forty-five years old. Mrs. Thomas was past fifty. They had been living together for eighteen months.

Before the consummation of the tragedy Mrs. Thomas wrote two letters to her friend, Mrs. Rose Wright. In them she told how she and Miller had planned to be married, but that marriage had become impossible because of Miller's insane jealousy.

Mrs. Thomas shot Miller in the back and waited for him to die.

"In less than ten minutes he was gone," she wrote.

After writing the letters she read a chapter from the Bible, turned on the gas and waited to "join poor Rick in Heaven, where we will be sweethearts, man and wife, as we were on earth."

The bodies were found after Mrs. Wright took the letters to the police.

TRAPPED IN BLAZING HOME

4 Brothers Die, Another Brother and 2 Sisters Saved at Fatal Cambridge Fire

Four brothers, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Justine Trembley, were burned today when fire destroyed the upper portion of their home at No. 26 Reed street, North Cambridge.

The dead are:

Ledger Trembley, 21 years old.
Ernest Trembley, 19 years old.
Warren Thenbley, 14 years old.
Lester Trembley, 12 years old.

Three other children, Edna, Violet and Leonard, were rescued, the first two by firemen and the last by the father.

When the fire was discovered by Patrick Griffin, who was delivering milk in a house in the rear, smoke was pouring from the upper windows. He dashed for help and found Sergeant William Curtin and Patrolmen Joseph Riendeau and David L. Walsh.

Sending in an alarm they rushed back to the house, but by the time the firemen reached the scene the upper part was a raging furnace.

Rousing the occupants, Engineman Wallace of Engine 8 and Laddermen Flynn and Newman fought their way into the second floor and rescued the two girls, while the father snatched Leonard and dashed to the street with him.

In the meantime, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Greenwood, with their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Walter Greenwood, and her infant child escaped to the street. Walter Greenwood was not at home.

As Mr. Trembley reached the street with Leonard he shouted to the firemen that his two girls were in the upper floor and at the same time made a frantic dash to gain the house to rescue them.

Firemen, however, held him back, while they tried to fight their way

ENDS LIFE WITH GUN IN ALLEY

Son of Professor, Disappointed Over Failure, Shoots Himself Four Times

Paton MacGilvray, thirty years old, member of the B. A. A. and son of a professor of philosophy in the University of Wisconsin, was found dead today in an alley off Harcourt street in the Back Bay, with four bullet wounds in his body.

Medical Examiner Timothy J. Leary gave his verdict as suicide, after an autopsy.

MacGilvray lived at No. 18 St. Botolph street, and had been employed for four months as a salesman by the Post & Lester Co., auto supplies, No. 218 Columbus avenue.

SUSPECTED FOUL PLAY.

Peculiar circumstances in connection with the death had at first caused the police to suspect foul play.

Friends of the young B. A. A. member say they know no reason for his self destruction unless he was galled by failure to make brilliant successes in the several positions he occupied since he came to Boston.

He was popular both with present and past employers and with social acquaintances.

According to Ida Cook, proprietor of the lodging house where he roomed, MacGilvray must have committed suicide after daybreak, as he entered

Municipal Plant Can Sell Gas at Cost

It may not have occurred to consumers in Boston that when they pay their monthly gas bills, they support not only the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, but all of its subsidiaries, which share in the spoils.

The above are a few striking statements made to the Boston American today by Raymond P. Delano, well known Boston attorney, chairman of the gas and electric light committee of the United Improvement Association and former president of the Dorchester Board of Trade.

Mr. Delano said he heartily favored a lighting plant controlled and operated by the city of Boston. He promised to submit the matter to the executive committee of the United Improvement Association for the purpose of deciding whether to act upon it at the next meeting of the association on the first Wednesday in June.

Mr. Delano today flayed the men in charge of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company and the Boston

Morning Glories Have Annual May Party

Here's Why Boston Needs a Municipal Light Plant

When the people of Boston pay their monthly gas bills they support not only the Boston Consolidated Gas Company but a chain of subsidiary companies, which come in for their share of the spoils.

The men who direct the affairs of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company and the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, who influence legislation and who charge the public extortionate rates, are a real menace, although they don't seem to realize it.

These men have done more, by their arrogant business methods, to destroy the confidence of the great middle class, the people who form the bulwark of the nation, than any wavers of red flags.

By their special privileges and their monopolistic policies they do more to create dissatisfaction and distrust among the people than do the most radical agitators.—From a statement made today to the Boston American by Raymond P. Delano, Boston attorney, chairman of the Gas and Electric Light Committee of the United Improvement Association and former president of the Dorchester Board of Trade.

SEE LONG DELAY IN PONZI TRIAL

Hearing on Pleas to Dismiss Indictments Is Fixed for Next Monday

The next round in the battle to save from further punishment Charles Ponzi, New England's foreign exchange wizard, in which collapse so many Near Englanders saw their dreams of wealth go unfulfilled, will be fought on next Monday when Judge Sanderson in the Superior Criminal Court, will hear motions to quash indictments still pending against Ponzi.

A time for the trial is expected to be fixed then, but unless the trial begins on or before May 23 it is believed likely that it will be postponed until Fall.

William H. Lewis, one of Ponzi's counsel, submitted pleas in abatement to the twenty-two indictments pending against Ponzi and others on the ground that Assistant Attorney-General Albert Hurwitz appeared before the Grand Jury without authority under the constitution of the United States or the laws of Massachusetts.

Americanism

Men of broad understanding and clear vision know that unless Practical Religion is in the hearts of men, Liberty will perish.

Among the Institutions in Greater Boston devoted to Higher Education, Boston College is unique in this respect; at Boston College, Practical Religion is co-equal with the instruments of mental training and discipline.

Boston College is open to all boys, irrespective of creed, on absolutely equal terms. Only Catholic boys are required to attend Religious Exercises.

It would be heartening to men who are concerned about the future, if the general response to the present appeal of Boston College showed more evidence that the real service of Boston College in the cause of TRUE AMERICANISM were better understood.

One cannot be alert to the compelling necessity of a better understanding among sincere men and be indifferent to the urgent needs of Boston College.

News of Motion Picture World

By FRIEDA DAVIS

A "[illegible] story" with a new twist — that's "Proxies," the Cosmopolitan picture playing at the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week. Of all the "crooks" who have come to the screen, Norman Kerry has done it with the greatest ease and with the most spirit.

It's not the case of the hardened criminal who is lured to the life of crime by the glitter of the underworld, but a case of the young man who is tempted by his little pranks to the point where he exchanges his birthright for the value of a few thousand dollars. Then comes the realization of what he has done, through the love of a girl, and the struggle to undo the wrong he has done.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, and has been made under his personal supervision for over 30 years. Allow no one to deceive you in this. Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but experiments, and endanger the health of Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and, by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. Think You're Wise? Try Edison's Test

New York, May 10—The air of mystery which has surrounded Thomas A. Edison's list of 100 questions, which, according to his claim, demonstrated "amazing ignorance on the part of college graduates," was partially dispelled today.

A young man, who admitted that he was one of the "unfortunates" unsuccessful in the examinations, gave some interesting information of the 100 questions which are said to:

HARRIS TO TRY DRY CASES

Orders From Washington Eliminate Herbert A. Horgan as Special Liquor Attorney

U. S. District Attorney Robert O. Harris has received a telegram from Washington eliminating him as prosecutor of all violations of the liquor laws in this district.

This action is taken to practically eliminate Herbert A. Horgan from prosecution of alleged Volstead act violations, where to proceed in such cases according to the United States District Attorney's office.

Horgan was appointed last January, taking upon himself the task of cleaning up conditions in Harris' territory. The recently alleged clean-up regarding the Volstead act and its enforcement was reported to have resulted in the collection of a good round sum for the Anti-Saloon League, obtaining Horgan's appointment.

The telegram, Judge Harris stated, came in response of Attorney Horgan.

Horgan's conduct of cases was severely criticized by counsel for defendants who objected to the method of procedure in bringing cases into court on information, rather than presenting the cases for the consideration of the Federal Grand Jury.

Since taking office he has been forced constantly to combat a hostile array of legal talent.

Eggs 16 Cts., Gas 19 a Qt. on Auto Tour

Such were some of the prices that Ira G. Carlton of Fresno, Cal., found on an auto trip to Boston. The 16-cent eggs he found at Salt Lake City, and the 19-cent gasoline in southern Wisconsin.

In many towns, New Mexico and Arizona charged as much as 25 cents a quart for gasoline, Mr. Carlton said.

During the entire trip he slept in the car all but two nights and those times he was forced to engage a room at a hotel because of heavy rains. Meals were cooked beside the road on a gasoline stove. The front seat of the five-passenger touring car was let down each night and this was used for a bed. He will leave for the return trip on Monday.

Why It Is Called "The Greatest Body Builder"

The reason that Father John's Medicine has been called the greatest body builder is because its pure food elements are so prepared that those who are weak and run down under weight and in poor health are able to take up the nourishment which it contains and really make use of it in building flesh and strength.

The system follows nature's own method in thus establishing normal health and strength. Father John's Medicine is not a stimulant and is guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as it can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

It the little glooms of household drudgery have made you blue—get a MASCO Mop and see them vanish.

No method of cleaning floors has ever been invented that equals the MASCO for quick, easy, thorough results. How come? Because the MASCO is just a bundle of big soft absorbent yarn that drinks up water like sand soaks up rain.

One over with a MASCO equals twice over with any other mop. It doesn't push the water around. It absorbs it in a jiffy and it wrings out just as easily as it takes up. No twisting, straining or hard squeezing. No grinding dirt into your hands.

The MASCO in the eight ounce size is just right for housewives. It is light in weight, the strings are short. It finds the corners. It doesn't flop or swish. It cuts work in two. For the big job there is a big MASCO.

Wherever mops are sold you will find the MASCO. If you don't see it ask for it. You will know it by its wrapper and its trademark. For the 8 oz. MASCO they ask 45c, 60c for the 12 oz. 75c for the 16 oz.

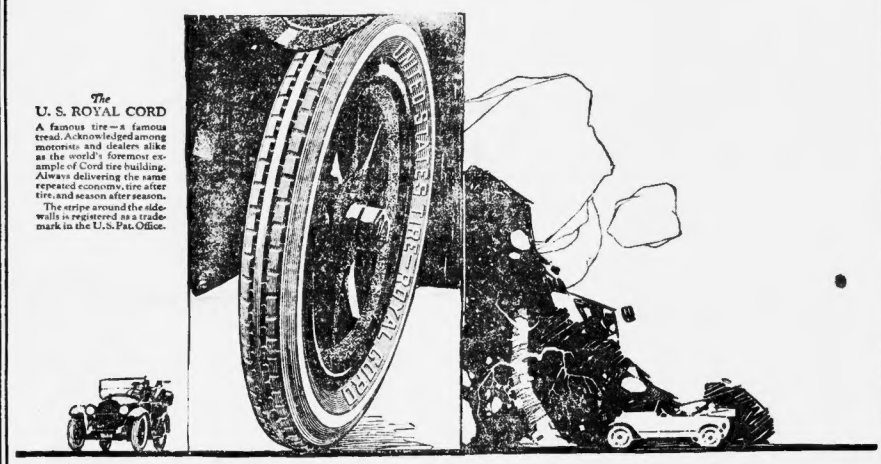
The
U. S. ROYAL CORD
A famous tire—a famous tread. Acknowledged among motorists and dealers alike as the world's foremost example of Cord tire building. Always delivering the same repeated economy, tire after tire, and season after season.
The stripe around the sidewalls is registered as a trademark in the U. S. Pat. Office.



The Tire Situation Right Now

WITHIN the next 24 hours American car owners will buy around $2,000,000 worth of tires.

People will say that here's another picture of American buying power.

Forgetting, perhaps, that the thinking power of the average citizen is the thing to be dealt with today.

Spectacular money and runaway expense don't go with him any more.

When he sets out to buy a tire he is not interested in big sales figures, but in the one individual tire he is getting here and now.

There is a movement among tire-dealers to make tire-economy a reality to the car owner.

These dealers are handling nothing but United States Tires. Gearing-up to meet the new thrift-times.

A customer comes in and asks for, let's say, a 35 x 5 Royal Cord. His size is in stock. No waiting. No being talked into a "second-choice" make or a "job-lot".

Open good faith on both sides of the deal.

All this is economy and service.

And there isn't any other kind of economy and service.

* * *

There are thousands of dealers right now who are concentrating on United States Tires.

Thousands more are getting ready to do the same thing.

They believe in U. S. quality, in the U. S. square policies—to the full extent that they put their whole personal investment behind what U. S. stands for.

It is a pleasure to say that these tire men are laying the corner-stone for a tire service far ahead of anything the motorist has ever known before.

Go where you find the U. S. Sign and see.

Bond Bread and "tea" for two

"POLLY—put the kettle on, and I'll slice the Bond Bread or would Polly rather have a cracker?"

"No, thank you. Polly doesn't want a cracker. I want Bond Bread, too."

IN the old Nursery Rhyme it was tea—but nowadays it's milk and Bond Bread. That's why the little social affairs in the mid-afternoon are good for the children.

Bond-Bread-and-milk is more than tasty—it is truly healthful, and it helps a youngster to grow a little stronger and bigger every day.

AND when mother serves her afternoon guests with real tea, and marmalade and toast, and some one exclaims:—"What wonderful toast!" mother tells the visitors that the toast is made from Bond Bread, which in turn is made from the pure and delicious ingredients listed in the bond on each wrapper.

From that Bond, Bond Bread is named.

William J. Burns, Famous Detective "Shadows" the Lone Wolf

Great Sleuth Says Pursuit of Master Criminal Interesting Experience

WILLIAM J. BURNS, WHOSE COMMENT ON THE LONE WOLF APPEARS IN THIS PAGE

In a letter to the publisher of Cosmopolitan Magazine, the eminent international detective says, he is deeply interested in "Allan the Lone Wolf," a mystery story by Louis Joseph Vance now appearing in that magazine.

That the Lone Wolf works alone, without confidants of any kind, was a phase of the story particularly appealing to Mr. Burns.

"It reminded me," he says in his letter, "of a famous forger I had to deal with a few years ago, who used a hundred aliases. For twenty-seven years he had baffled detection, although constantly engaged in 'laying down' his pen. This had to desired effect, he decided to forge no more. He became a successful broker, and was a leader in many civic reforms. But the relief gnawed from his work was his approach and he once made a personal visit that this man answered the description given previously in the Burns circular.

"The latter attended—the forger's business associates—as described in the circular. The teller at once noted the forger's arrest and notified us. The forger was in his office at the time, and the method of apprehending him was easy.

"I have always claimed that the criminal leaves a trace, and there are no exceptions, as we have found in every case. While taking the utmost care and using the most cunning methods to elude capture, and making his trick, not realizing that he has left behind him a method of apprehending him, which would eventually lead to his arrest.

"We were able to send to the Boston police, through the Boston Bankers' Association, a circular giving a most complete and perfect explanation of how this forger would approach his victims. We also furnished a description of his person and method of operation, and therefore also a specimen of his forgery.

"The first and second circulars were sent out immediately, and through the courtesy of the editor of printing the principal portions of the warning circulars in red type.

"Going to Rex Beach?

"Famous people are frequently amused to discover their favorite books on the bookstore stalls in.

"In fact, a well known motion picture producer, who owns two films, recently said that he was going to Rex Beach's office to see if he could get the author to write a one page autograph for him.

"Anxiety" to May Company and Mr. Beach assured that the author of "Pardon" in Many Languages," "The College Widow," has some of his old-time sparkle and action.

"Skinny, dank, death face in pew."

A Comedy of Terrors

A very amusing incident is related by Mary Roberts Rinehart in May Cosmopolitan. It occurred at Wells, a famous summer resort full theaters, hotels and boarding houses.

In some of the short time Mrs. Rinehart visited the place, a famous motion picture star came there to stage a picture. The star was a big magnificent.

Then it went back to his room and made a statement which he proceeded to carry out, as he put on his shaving shaker, lather and disappeared.

Later the star rose back to his room and found it to the bedroom in the schoolhouse.

They watched the film anxiously enough until—horror of horrors!—they saw their star's face appear in the film, as he began the whole audience rushed to the windows and stood out.

Great was their relief to discover that Walter Huston Waltz was safe and whole, against the daffy sky.

Real Mrs. Atterbury's de-tective career in May Cosmopolitan.

Hunting De Luxe

Great hunting excursion with Theodore Roosevelt, famous cowboy, cattleman, pioneer, and Rough Rider, is described in May Cosmopolitan. It was a trip through the heart of darkest Africa, with a scientific expedition. Many of the adventures that would put a Wild West show to shame.

All But One

Neglected waves of wayward children, and beam a new and effective method of reform in "Beyond the Law," by Dr. Herbert Hall Hewitt, in May Cosmopolitan.

Dr. Hewitt's method is the result of large size, and every effort is made to keep the individuality except his worst traits.

Also plain colors, made in straight model.

The Death of Marie Toro

Robert W. Service, author of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," "The Spell of The Yukon," and a hundred other swinging, virile poems of the Great Northwest, is one of the most popular of living poets.

There was never a better story teller; and as the fascination of that fine spirit of his guesses bullied-proof.

Cowboy, soldiers, sailors, miners, adventurers, sailors of all sorts and conditions of people read Service.

Don't fail to read "The Death of Marie Toro" this issue of May Cosmopolitan. It was written in Paris, where Service now lives and is full of the color and the music and vital. "The Man Who Looked Like Edison."

Do You Look Like Harding?

Probably not, but if you do, everyone you meet will want to see you thinks of you would have an effect on your health! Wouldn't you immediately adopt some of the characteristics of the President-elect? Wouldn't you practice of a great leader?

This interesting question is handled with great insight by Samuel Hopkins Adams in May Cosmopolitan. It is one and read. "The Man Who Looked Like Edison."

Twelve Good Men and True

George Ade, the last of other successful books, would be the last person to suppose his beautiful estate in Indiana, to be used as a farm or bank for farmers.

That Cosmopolitan's editor has found evidence of the great interest in Ade's plan of a one-page editorial each month.

Which reminds us of the society lady who asked the gentlemen friend if Rex Beach was a Summer resort!

U. S. to Pay Civil War Bill of Bay State

Washington, May 10—The Senate of the United States has decided that the State of Massachusetts should be reimbursed for expenses incurred more than half a century ago in the defense of President Lincoln in protecting the capital of the nation during the early days of the War, it was by the purpose intervened by Senator Lodge was passed unanimously. It provides for the payment to the Governor of Massachusetts of $505,000 in accordance with a decision in 1910 of the United States court of claims.

PATERNO LOVE NOTE QUOTED

New York, May 10—Special letters which she says were written to her by her husband when he was serving in the entertainment corps from made public by Mrs. Helen F. Paterno as part of her answer to charges that her husband, who is under indictment in connection with the wartime slacker of Captain Frederick Funston, was a slacker.

Mrs. Paterno has mentioned Dr. Maurice Bernstein as author of the letters. Further contended that Mrs. Paterno "confessed him [Paterno] to be weak into suffering."

Mrs. Paterno testified in Federal Court yesterday that Dr. Bernstein had written her letters in which he said:

"My dear girl, I love you."

"Yes, darling, I am with all. Feel that I am with you in spirit before and have cancelled going to Detroit. Ohio, because the deal is well out of hand. Am sending you a box of candy and a few magazines. I have received through the mail of insurance premiums that I have taken out of them for me."

"I know if I had you in my arms and could rest my head on your breast in a few minutes I would be all right."

The Origin of Boycott

THE word boycott had a peculiar origin. It is derived from its first victim. When, in 1880, the Irish Land League began the policy of holding no relations of any sort with its opponents, a Captain Boycott was the original victim.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

THEY went to walk from the ruin to their home and she discovered that, of Penn's many fine great-lengths, this afternoon was the most wonderful. The transformation at first was taken easily for granted, but gradually it began to instill that expansion in words . . . She would not have thought it possible to be so strong and confident as he was to-day. She could not, and it always mattered whom he had to do for her. She could not, she could not answer questions which he put to her. She could not be sure with nothing but the instinct of the moment to work with, to make a decision out of a possibility.

Manners listened with gentleness and gravity. Her words went to at one of what they were saying. He answered her almost inaudibly. "I see. It is a good deal to be responsible for a fellow. I really have been flayed over you. I'm glad there be only your happiness ahead of his now."

Diana agreed emphatically. And in the midst of her agreement she showed with a naïveté absolutely, quite humorous, the road on which she thought that her happiness could best be reached.

"Yes," she said decisively. "He will do anything I want."

At the one stricken look a moment and from the day of their marriage had for some years freely made to her, she went on, unfeeling. It was not until she had stopped saying that that he will ever offered any serious opposition to anything she suggested. He now thought, to have opposed some of them very firmly while she still loved me. If I had done that he might have come to rely on it, might never have given in about going to Newport, that first autumn, might never have given in about this and that."

He could not be sure whether his failure to oppose Diana to decisions which in the light of after events had been due to weakness or to his love for her. He wished to put the whole blame on love; for no man likes to confess even to himself that his will is really weak.

Strong Will

As a matter of fact, his will had strengths and weaknesses. His will was strong, was exceptionally strong. But when it came to opposing Diana his will was on weak ground. That is to say, it was a natural will for argument. Then into a defeat readily turning into a rout he would throw his best reserves, sarcasm and anger, and see them completely annihilated. He had never been able to give Diana a No that meant No. And that undoubtedly was the real reason why why their married life had for some time been tragedy.

Manners was no longer in Diana had splendid qualities in her, and her husband had failed to bring them out. He had ignited her . . . Diana spent the next day and night in town, and the day and night following. Manners had appointed that as the time when she was going to see Penn and where, and she told him. She was to see Penn on the afternoon of the third day and she was to dine with him, and afterward he was to take her home. She would be ready at seven.

She was ready when he arrived, a little before it at the appointed time, and she was standing in a bright light with her hands raised to her hair.

In common with most of the young women of her generation, Diana seemed about with her in what is called a vanity bag a small mirror, a powder puff, a lip stick and then intensified the color of her lips. In common with the other young women she did this not because she was vain but from nothing to do. And in common with the other young women she did this not because she was self-conscious, to explain was a slick of colorless grease would not have served as well.

It was a habit to which Manners had strongly objected again and again. Diana's lips needed no compliments. They were sweet lips and they were safe enough.

She finished putting on her rouge and then she put on her veil. And Manners noted that she finished all of the red grease slick which usually intervened between the two manœuvres, had been omitted. She was going to see Penn, with her lips as God made them.

Manners could not trust himself to speak. And he turned away so that she might not see the reflection of his face in the mirror.

"Do you?" he thought. "I have had to forgive you greater but Penn gets the real thing."

Deep Depression

And he began to swallow from hand to foot with a alcoholic and nonalcoholic anguishes. He got through the evening two days and nights and he [illegible] to [illegible] thing to be stabbed in the back by the person you love most and to be betrayed without rhyme or reason.

And though Manners went deeply against the principles of conduct he would not help showing his aggression. Diana, sitting on the sofa, trembled at the corners; the laugh was mechanical, and the reasons which he gave for his loss of appetite were not well received. Mrs. Langham herself might have passed for a singularly unobservant woman. But Diana knew perfectly well that anything was wrong between anybody. She was serene, cheerful and ready to talk on any subject at any time. The expression of utter outward manifestations of what she really felt was natural to her, and she had cultivated that gift until it was notorious.

But outwardly she was half-dead with anxiety, for the treatment which Diana had accorded to Manners since his return from California seemed almost maliciously calculated to hurt and estrange.

Diana's flirtation with Penn had been a source of irritation and worry and she had at one time considered resigning her non-invitation to come home, but that the direction had in it monstrous possibilities for harm was only just beginning to occur to her and to recur.

She, too, had always had faith in Diana's ultimate good sense. And this faith was not easily shaken. Diana indeed was so like her mother that it was almost impossible to believe that there could be anywhere in her a loose screw. She had the same face and dignity, the same [illegible] and charming way of saying her head; the same power of [illegible] and [illegible] point to [illegible] her deepest emotions and to be calm in the midst of the most dire catastrophe.

Mrs. Langham showed with a poignant longing to know what was happening in her daughter's heart. And it would have lightened the load which he was carrying if he could have had any inkling of the intensity of splendid self-control that fed him. He did not even know that the circumstances which, ordinarily, would not to indicate on her part a desperate decision were still take his time. Some regard of [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to be shattered by a mere sense of justice.

And the Storm Breaks

Diana did not return to the country the afternoon of the third day. She knew that she had been [illegible] to [illegible] point of [illegible] and she drawn [illegible] Manners' face and the [illegible] expression in his eyes told her that there would be a struggle. But she had her gun in case showed neither regret nor concern. She felt on bolstered by the strength of Penn's intelligence and consideration that she feared nothing.

The storm broke almost at once. Manners followed her into her room and closed the door after him.

Diana," he said [illegible] and you that you could see right [illegible] in a while. That is [illegible] Times in two days, and I don't know how many times to-day.

"I haven't seen him at all to-day," she said, coldly, and began to take off her hat.

"It isn't altogether what you should have called the question of the looks of the thing. Young girl yourself indeed about."

"Don't be afraid of that," [illegible] is [illegible] as [illegible] of misrepresentation as you are."

"People know that I'm only on for a few days, and they see you spending all your time in town, and they'll talk."

"Let them. What [illegible] know—"

"It isn't what people know that matters, it's what people think."

Now though Diana habitually repressed her deeper emotions, and [illegible] to [illegible] on [illegible] sometimes she ruled her husband by charms; sometimes by wheedling; sometimes by coldness and worst; sometimes by [illegible] differences with him it never occurred to her to fight fair, and to get a decision test with logic and good sense.

"First," she said in a voice almost frozen with injury, "you say that you think of nothing but my happiness, and then you nominate [illegible] to go where happiness is [illegible] and [illegible] what is so happy and relieved when I say that you and you were so sweet and forgiving and friendly. But I might have known that it was only a pose and that you couldn't keep it up. I wish to heaven I hadn't told you."

"I'd have found out, Diana. The thought of your keeping the thing from me indefinitely [illegible] I did mean to be steadily kind and forbearing. And when you [illegible] you were [illegible] each other once in a while I meant once in a while I tried to be fair and just. I don't see why you can't try."

"Oh, you're always so fair and just," she flung these words at him like bricks from a grim. That had roused the tigress in her, and was fighting for her right to do as she pleased, for her right to love and be loved, for her right to have a solemn moment the moment her part of it became tiresome. She [illegible] fighting you may say, for her favorite cubs.

"Don't you ever want to get over caring for this fellow and do right?" he said.

"I don't know what you mean by doing right. To live with a man I don't love, to be his chattel, like now—that's not my idea of doing right. You seem to think that you own me body and soul.

"I think that when you promised to be my partner till death you meant it."

"Oh, that," she explained. "I also promised to love you for the same length of time. Is it my fault if I've stopped?"

If he hadn't stopped loving you, Diana, you'd never have known it. I'd never have done to you what you've done to me—not once, but twice."

"You say you wouldn't, but you don't know. And I don't know and don't believe it anyway."

"Your first blow-up stopped hurting you three months after you stopped seeing. What's the sense? Stop seeing this man and it will be the same."

A Subtle Plea

"You don't understand," she said in a more restrained voice. "I'm older and I know my own mind."

"If your heart you don't know, Diana. I can't help going on precedent. Your love, even your friendship, is not to be relied on. But if you are so sure this time, why not test the matter out? That is only fair to me. I love you and want to keep you, and I think that in the long run your best chance of happiness is with Tam and me. Test your love for Penn. Disastrous Effect of R. R. Freight Rates Increase

Mr. Ralph S. Bauer of Lynn, Massachusetts, president of the American Stationers' Association, tells of the desolating effect of the increased freight rates which the railroads charged immediately after the government returned them to their old private managers, and which Mr. Bauer observed on an official trip across the country.

He said that he saw thousands of tons of oranges and all kinds of the finest fruit which America produces lying on the ground to rot, because the freight rates were so high that they could not be shipped to the consumer at a price which the consumer could afford to pay for them.

We heard another day of the effect of this increased freight rate in a single county in California where they grow melons. While the government was operating the railroads this county shipped at a good profit the fruit to the East. When the railroads were returned to their old private mismanagers, and those managers immediately made an increase in the freight rate of 35 per cent., the fruit growers of that county found that they could not make the cost of the crating on the fruit they shipped to the East after paying the increased freight rates.

A representative of the co-operative association was asked what they intended to do about it. He said: "We intend to abandon this fruit crop and produce next year an entirely different kind of crop which will yield to the railroads only one-fourth what they received on fruit." Now this is disastrous to the fruit growers and disastrous to the railroads. Nobody profits by it and everybody is harmed.

This was the effect of the return of the railroads to private management all over the country and it has helped if it did not entirely produce the hard times we now suffer.

This is one of the reasons, after a year of experiment with private management of the railroads under conditions which the private managers themselves prescribed, the railroads have broken down and are at the point of bankruptcy everywhere. This is the reason why intelligent men having money to invest will not put a cent into railroad stocks. This is the reason why insurance companies, savings banks, college trustees and those who hold even the bonds of the railroads, are becoming alarmed, and when a bondholder is alarmed the situation of the stockholder is poor indeed.

We cannot understand why in the light of all this the stockholders do not rise in their wrath and throw out these private managers and tell the government to come and take the railroads and perform the duty of transportation, which always was and always ought to be a strictly public function.

Future Aid to Europe

The resolution before the House of Representatives concerning the reduction of naval armament contains a condition precedent to any aid which the United States will give to the European nations in respect to building beyond the power of the other nations to build a navy, as we so eas- 7 can, or with respect to any other aid which we might render the European nations. That condition requires that none of the money spent by the European nations which seek our aid shall be spent for any kind of armament, naval or military, or for any imperialistic purpose involving the denial of the right of self-determination or involving the acquisition or retention of unjust privileges by one people at the expense of another people.

We earnestly hope that such a condition will be embodied in any aid we may render the European situation. Thus the wrong of the assistance given to Poland against Russia was not that we fed the Poles, but that by feeding the Poles we allowed the Poles to leave their factories unmanned and their farms untilled, and encouraged their landlord class to slaughter their peasants and workmen in a wanton attack on Russia, and then when the slaughter was over to leave the remnants starving in a real economic void such as our big business men like to convince us that Russia is now, forgetting as they do that however bad Russia's condition may be, it was the war and the Czar's corrupt and inefficient government and the barbarous blockade of four years by the outside world which has caused the Russian conditions and that Poland, aided by the whole world, is in just as bad a condition.

If the Harding administration can, without necessary sacrifice, aid Europe to rehabilitation by first compelling Europe to abandon its selfishness and barbarism, it will without the same hypocritical professions of idealism undo the damage which Wilsonianism worked in Europe when it bought a whited sepulchre with the name of the League of Nations written on its silver plate and paid for it the very lip and soul of the objects for which we professed to have fought the war and for the maintenance of which imperialistic England and France and Mr. Wilson professed that he wanted a League of Nations.

Building Should Boom Now

William Hutchinson, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, has announced that the Building Trades Unions are willing and ready to arbitrate the question of wages.

If this is so, then who opposes arbitration and who will take the responsibility of continuing the great dearth in housing facilities throughout the United States?

Mr. Hutchinson declared that while the building trades workmen are naturally loath to accept wage reductions, they are, nevertheless, "willing to consider and accept an equitable wage adjustment that would be fitting in view of any reductions in the cost of living. We want to be fair and see that building boom."

This strikes us as eminently fair. What, therefore, is to prevent building from booming?

Jail Drunken Auto Drivers

A news item reports that an Arlington man was found guilty in the Charlestown Police Court for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He was fined $100 and he was placed on probation.

We do not know all the circumstances of this case or what circumstance, not disclosed in the meagre news item, impelled the judge to impose a fine and not a prison sentence, but if there were no specially mitigating circumstances, then we should think that a jail sentence ought to have been imposed. A drunken man who attempts to operate a car puts in jeopardy the life of everybody along the streets which he travels. The law prescribes no penalities too severe for this kind of offense.

DESTINY

By S. E. KISER

CALVES come into the world because they are wanted to serve men's needs,
Some for their chops and joints and brains, and some for their little hides;
Some are appointed to reproduce and perpetuate their breeds,
Some for butter and some for beef—always as man decides.

Boys come into the world to serve as the gray old rulers vote,
Some to sweat in the infantry, others to take the air;
Some to look in the face of death where mines have been set afoot—
All to plunge into burning hells if the old men send them there!

They go to the wars that the old men make, to kill and, perhaps, to die;
What if they like the task or not, or hate or approve the cause?
The boys have no more to say than calves; they needn't be asking why;
They are ordered forth, and must go in haste—they are traitorous if they pause!

They fight the battles where filth is deep; by them the victory's won;
They put their weapons away and turn to the tasks that await their care;
But the old men, parleying, shake their heads after the fighting's done,
And may order the battles to be renewed, for still there are boys to spare!

VIBRATIONS OF SOUND AND AIR WAVES

By Garrett P. Serviss.

"I have several times read the statement that if a regiment was placed on the plank the vibrations would cause a structure to collapse. Is there any truth in it?"—W. B., Brooklyn.

THE statement is based on a true principle of physics, but it is but true in the form above quoted. No mere tramp of a body can cause the collapse of a building, though it might produce the fall of a loosely-constructed house of cards. But if the violin were big enough to suit the giant Gargantua and capable of producing vibrations comparable in power to those of an earthquake, then the result would be altered.

It is not solely a question of striking a sympathetic note, but one of intensity of the force in relation to the resistance to be overcome. The resistance must also be considered. The waves of sound corresponding to the lower notes of an organ will often produce a powerful vibration, though a large building like a church is not nearly strong enough to endanger the stability of its walls.

Rapidly Pile Up

The first effects of the communicated vibrations are too slight to be noticed, but they rapidly pile up through the synchronous repetition of the impulses, on the principle by which a swing may be caused to rise higher and higher at the end of each excursion by applying a renewed push just at the right moment to add its velocity to that which the swing already possesses.

But there is a limit to the height that can be attained, depending upon the relation of the impulse to the increase of resistance.

In a tall building the period of vibration of its structure as a whole is long—two seconds in one case—which would correspond to a sound wave 2,340 feet long. The longest sound waves used in music (lowest notes are less than 30 feet long. But there are wind waves sufficiently long and strong to affect tall buildings perceptibly, though not dangerously.

Wind Pressure Precautions

That they might be dangerous in some cases, however, is intimated by the existence of building laws which fix special requirements for "wind-bracing" and precautions against wind pressure.

It would be possible to employ vibratory energy in many ways mechanically. Mr. Edison once set the example, quite early in his career by inventing a "phonemotor, acting on this principle. It could be driven by the sounds of the human voice and had force enough to turn a grinder, a fact that led the inventor to remark that with this machine a man could "talk a hole through a board."

Stars and Stripes

Too much finery smothers refinement.

Man, on his physical side, is less than a beast; and on his spiritual side, less than an angel.

PICTURE OF THE BLIND LEADING BLIND

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

A PRETTY and pathetic picture puzzled me the other day.

As partial celebration of a legal holiday we spent a happy hour at the Art Museum.

Much interested in the permanent exhibition of things of beauty and all of them a joy forever, and wandering amid the paintings and sculptures of the Italian Renaissance, my attention was suddenly attracted by a little group that appeared to be rather out of place.

They moved rather timidly around the gallery, seemingly not so much due as to assess the objects of art.

The manner of the two was a boy of almost ten, the elder a man of about forty. They were blind, the father as the hands-reading attitude quickly showed. The expected ones were the boy's hands, for they did not see the pictures. Apparently they were there to feel them all.

For Whose Benefit.

What could the boy perceive? And what could the child learn from such a visit?

Naturally, we were moved to speculate about such an apparition. For whose benefit did those two make this seemingly futile pilgrimage?

The man was gaunt, his face looked drawn; he seemed supersensitive. Perhaps he had himself been a painter, and then blindness had opened his eyes and destroyed his sight. Perhaps he had sacrificed his vision to his imagination, to achieve his masterpiece. Perhaps God had blinded him in order to make him really a seer and permit him to behold such beauty as never was on sea or land.

So we speculated, but before we could question the pair, indeed we were reluctant to intrude upon the privacy of these strange, unseeing visitants to the Art Museum they had gone.

And then there came to mind Wadsworth's lines, in his "Intimations of Immortality," paying tribute to the child. They said something about the child's exterior belying his soul's immensity. And then I, poor callow him an eye among the blind—a philosopher that deaf and silent, was haunted forever by the eternal mind.

Sightless Father

We speculated further. Perhaps this little boy was simply an intellectually unseeing child, guiding his sightless father, and thus leading the blind among his beloved paintings. Perhaps the fond father had brought his son to the museum in order to let him profit from his mere presence in the atmosphere of beauty.

Finally, best satisfying was the suggestion of a possibly blind parent leading authoritatively the seemingly sighted child, who yet had to accept the unseeing father's dictatorship.

For it must be acknowledged that much of the blindness of the race is due to blind parenthood. Parents are unprepared for the responsible task of passing forward the gains of the generations.

Also it must be asked: How many parents have that reverence for human life, that gratitude of high expectancy toward the child which enables them to see that trailing cloud of glory do we come?

It would be fascinating to follow the trains of thought suggested by that living, mobile picture of the blind father, with apparently inner vision, conducting and being conducted by his seeing boy around that storehouse of beauty.

Natural and Obvious

Just one must suffice. It is the natural and obvious, suggested by the need for closer, more sympathetic relationship between parents and children, between the going generation and the coming one.

And this sympathy must be based upon fuller mutual understanding. For, in a sad sense and unspeakably, it remains true that the generations, parents and children, are the blind leading the blind.

This wondrous world of ours is a Museum of Art. Mainly, we are blind to its beauty. Full of treasure, too, did we but see it and seize it and use it! Full, too, of truths, illuminating truth—eternal revelations of the Eternal—could we but read and discern and understand them!

Did we but know it, to all this truth and treasure and beauty the generations could guide each other, father and child holding hands in love and sympathy.

Parents, wise in the experience of life; children, coming with fresh vision from the fountain light of all our day, together, pushing forward the frontiers of darkness toward the master-light of all our seeing.

If, indeed, we are the blind leading the blind, we can walk together in mutual helpfulness.
